About Dr. Marshall

I provide individual, couples, and group therapy to address a variety of concerns. Much of my clinical experience was gained in community mental health agencies and the Veterans Health Administration, giving me particular expertise in mood and anxiety disorders, as well as post-traumatic stress disorder.

I have also worked extensively with postpartum women, LGBTQ+ clients, dementia caregivers, and individuals and families adjusting to serious medical conditions such as traumatic brain injury, multiple sclerosis, and Parkinson's disease.

Clinical research evidence suggests that psychotherapy should be tailored to an individual's needs. We will work together to assess what areas of your life you desire to change, and to make a treatment plan using evidence-based approaches where appropriate.

Marshall Psychological Services works with patients in both Virginia and New York.
